

BATHROOM HUMOR

Let the summer begin with a few chuckles.....

Did you know that custodial supply companies discovered that if items were placed in urinals that “overshots” decreased?

Further explanation: if yellow ducks or targets were placed in urinals, custodians did not have to do as much clean up around the urinals.

An old one but good one..... A principal was fed up with female students kissing the restroom mirrors and leaving lipstick impressions. He pulled a small group of students into a restroom and stated he wanted to show them how much more time this added to the custodian’s duties. After he gave a short lecture to the students, he asked the custodian to demonstrate. The custodian sighed, dipped a rag in the toilet and wiped the mirror clean. There was no longer lipstick impressions left on the mirrors at that school.

My sister is a monitor at a high school in Sonoma County. She shared with me how every time she catches a student with a certain substance (usually referred to as an agricultural asset of Humboldt County), they all have the same response, “They found it in the school restroom”. Her response to them is “Do you put everything you find in the restroom in your mouth?”

Have a great summer!
